Summary of Legislation
November 2015

Sales Tax Plan That Included Professional Services Fails

As the budget debate continues, side issues continue to rise and fall in the General Assembly. November's issues were liquor privatization and property tax reform. Both of these issues have been brought to the table by various parties to the budget negotiations, including the Governor, but have not achieved legislative success. House Speaker Mike Turzai (R-Allegheny) has made liquor privatization his number one personal priority, and this has been a key hold up to negotiations. The House had earlier passed a liquor bill, but the Senate responded with a different version, and the Governor vetoed it. Nonetheless, Rep. Turzai kept the issue going, and this fall reintroduced a slightly modified version of his original bill and it again passed the House this past month, and it sits in the Senate Law and Justice Committee, awaiting a decision by the Senate to move it again.

Meanwhile, Sen. Dave Argall (R-Schuylkill) was pushing his own quest, which he described as property tax elimination, and had introduced as SB 76. This amendment would have raised the personal income and sales and use taxes, and applied the sales and use tax to many items and professional services, including design and construction services, not currently subject to the tax. Similar legislation had been previously sounded defeated in the House. Senate leaders promised him a vote on his legislation, though only as an amendment to a House bill, HB 683, which was on the Senate calendar. After several hours of impassioned debate, the amendment failed on a tie vote broken by Lt. Mike Stack (D-Philadelphia). The Lt. Governor may vote to break ties on procedural motions and amendments, not final passage on bills, so he was provided with a rare opportunity to cast a vote. That now put to rest, House and Senate leaders and staff then spent the Thanksgiving holiday working on a budget proposal they thought they could get finally completed by early December. The House added several session days the first two weeks of December. Whether they happen remains to be seen.
